IMPORTANT NOTICE

In recent months, there have been numerous suspicious and/or malicious emails sent from ‘hackers’ who attempt to make the messages appear as though they are from the State Board of Examiners of Plumbing, Heating and Fire Sprinkler Contractors (“the Board”).

These messages usually include attachments and/or links with names that make them appear to be from the Board. These attachments and links can be delivery routes for malware, spyware, ransomware, and other nefarious things that can infect the digital device that they are opened on as well as any computer network(s) that the device may be connected to.

The most recent attempts have included not only the Board’s name (NClicensing), but also bear the Board’s official seal.

Anyone who receives email should always take time to look at the sender information. The email address will often be suspicious and should be a red flag warning to the user that the message is potentially harmful.

If you receive any email appearing to be from the Board and have any question or doubt about its legitimacy, do not click on any attachments or links. Please notify us by forwarding the message to webmaster@nclicensing.org so that we will be aware of any attempts by bad actors.

The State Board of Examiners of Plumbing, Heating and Fire Sprinkler Contractors (“the Board”) is not responsible for any damages that may result from illegitimate emails bearing the Board’s name, seal, employee names, address, website url, or any other information intended to make the recipient believe that the message, content, attachments, or links were created and/or distributed by the Board.
